

A 5x5 grid of squares. A solid red horizontal line runs through the middle of the grid, separating the top two rows from the bottom three rows. A solid blue vertical line runs through the middle of the grid, separating the first two columns from the last three columns. The intersection of these two lines is at the center of the grid, specifically at the center of the square in the third row and third column.